

Jan Rogers

Maternal Child Health Coordinator | Center for Health Equity at Louisville Metro Department of Public Health and Wellness

Jan Rogers has worked as a Health Program Analyst within the Center for Health Equity (CHE) at Louisville Metro Public Health and Wellness since January. Prior to stepping into her current role, she served as a Maternal Health Coordinator within CHE for a year. Her role in the department has allowed her to step in as a facilitator for the Healthy Babies Louisville Coalition. While completing her bachelor's degree, she worked alongside Louisville Metro Public Health and Wellness as an intern and assisted with the Participatory Budgeting Initiative, a piloting democratic process that allows community members to decide how public funds are allocated. Jan graduated from the University of Louisville with a Bachelor of Science in Public Health and Information Sciences. While attending the university she was inspired by a professor to become a birth and postpartum doula.
